Faces In The Water Janet

Mar 06, 2009 rated it really liked it. Faces in the Water is technicolour. Language and imagery mercury fluid so as to immerse the reader into the compelling experience of Istina Mavet-incarcerated in a mental institution in New Zealand in the 1950's for 8 years (as had the author Janet Frame).

Faces in the Water by Janet Frame - Goodreads

Faces In The Water is a beautifully written story about mental illness. Janet Frame takes a taboo subject and makes it a poetic narrative of insight. I highly recommend this novel.

The reflection here is that of the patients in a New Zealand mental hospital, and particularly that of Istina Mavel, a school teacher in her early 20's when she first went to Cliffhaven, ""lost in a foreign land"". Necessarily an involute experience, this Ilmns the ""solitary, self-contained worlds"" of those who have withdrawn from reality and here find the sameness of days and nights and ...

Melancholia in Janet Frame's Faces in the Water. Faces in the Water is then a multi-layered tale, at once the author's therapeutic homework and the literary treatment of madness, a treatment in which her autobiographical work did not allow Frame to engage. It is not a defense of "the mad" or a political pamphlet.
