It's not one of the best (ones) I've seen. So it's not a matter of grammar, but a matter of telling the truth. If you would classify it only as good (or less than good), then it's not one of the better ones you've seen. If you would classify it as one of the better ones, but not one of the best ones, then it's not one of the best ones you've seen.

Better Vs. Best: What's The Correct Use? - ENGLISH FORUMS

"Best" is a superlative, i.e. it states the position of this one thing compared to all the other things under discussion. If I have three choices, A, B, and C, all the following statements could be true: A is better than B. B is better than C. A is better than C. A is the best. If one thing is better than another, others could be better still.

For ESL learners it is important to learn "good, better, best" and "bad, worse, worst" because they are very commonly used. Also, "more, most" and "less, least" are very commonly used. It is fair to say that those adjectives known as "absolute terms" are also irregular adjectives, because they have no comparatives whatsoever.
